Increase in Railroad Business Last Year

it is somewhat cheering to know that, in spite of the depression in stocks, the earnings on our railroads for last year show scarcely any diminution over those From advanced sheets of that most useful publication, "Poor's Manual," we learn that the gross carnings of all lines for 1874 amounted to $520,466,-016, against $526,419,935 for the year preceding—a decrease of only about one per cent.; while the net earnings were 189,570,563, against 183,810,562 for 1873—an increase of over three per cent. 042,942, being only $77,267 less than for 1873. TILTON-BEECHER. ion of the Famous Trial-Disag

The celebrated trial of Tilton vs. eecher has at last come to a conclu having resulted, as was generally anticipated, in a disagreement of the jury. The case was submitted to the jury on Thursday, June 24. On the following Thursday, June 24. On the following Thursday they came into court and notified Judge Neilson that there was no probability of an agreement. The Judge, however, sent them back to their room, with instructions to disregard the Price and Loader affidavits, which had been shown to be false. On the following day, Friday, July 2, they again sent a note to Judge Neilson, stating that it was impossible to agree upon a verdict, whereupon they were summoned into court. What followed is thus described by the Associated Press dispatches:

At 11:17 the jury filed into court, looking as if they had passed a sleepless night. In reply to the question: "Gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed upon a verdict?" Foreman Carpenter replied: a verdict?" Foreman Carpenter replied:
"We have not, your Honor. We regret it very much that we find it impossible to agree."

Judge Neilson stated that he had learned by a note from the jury, early this morning, that in their opinion they should be discharged, as they could not agree, and some of their number were suffering in health. He experienced the force of that application very strongly, and had called them in now, at the earliest the strength of the str est moment, giving to counsel and others an opportunity of being present.

As they were about to separate, he would like them to carry away kindly recollections, and, so far as they could remove whatever chagrin they felt at be ing detained so long. He wished them to recollect the fact that not until yesterto recollect the fact that not until yester-day did they suggest that they could not agree, and that suggestion came from their foreman, signed by eleven, and ac-companied by another from one juror, who thought an agreement possible. While he had perfect regard and confi-dence in the opinion of the eleven, and the explanation of the foreman, he the explanation of the foreman, he thought something was due to the twelfth juryman. His Honor had the same thing on his mind yesterday at 4 o'clock, and he allowed Juryman Taylor to devote his time to bring about an agreement, so far as he could. He learned from the note that they were unable to agree, and that the disagreement was founded on their inability to decide upon the weight of the testimony and the credibility of the witnesses, and it appeared bility of the witnesses, and it appeared to his Honor and every person conver-sant with the case that it was impossible for him to help them by any suggestions. Not even in his charge could he find a means of helping them on that point. The weight of the testimony rested with the jury. It was for them to say what witnesses they could believe and what witnesses they could not. The court had no right to interfere. He was glad to be assured that the disagreement did A large number of distinguished guests, including the Lord Mayors of London and York, were present.

The Irish riflemen admit the superiority of the Americans throughout the lord may be a sured that the disagreement did not arise from any want of attention on his part, and God knew that there were some points on which he could do nothing.

The jury was then discharged and conviction and five for acquittal, but at the close stood nine to three for Beecher. It is rumored that Tilton will move It is also intimated that he will endeavor to procure the indictment of Gen. Trace or perjury.

Mr. Beecher regards the result of the trial as a perfect vindication.

The recent celebration at Maysville Ky., of the centennial of the first cornplanting in Mason county brought out the following story: On the 23d of June, 1870, a company of 600 Canadia cer, came, with six cannon, in boats or canoes, down the Big Miami river, up thence up the Licking river to Ruddle's or Hinkson's station. Their approach was most painfully here heralded to the little company of settlers by the boom-ing of a cannon—a sound which had never before waked the echoes in Kenpromises of protection by the British from Indian ferocity and indignities, and of kind treatment as prisoners. But no white man ever yet could restrain the terrible passions of Indian warriors with prisoners in their hands, and in this case their terrible fate by threats of instantly returning to Canada, and abandoning the expedition. Martin's station, five miles distant and three miles below Paris, n Stoner creek, was surrendered; *but Col. Byrd, although the Indians divided the spoils among themselves. Among the captured at Ruddle's station were neveral boys. John Ruddle could foot; he was tomahawked and scalped, Stephen, were spared because of their cheerfulness and bravery. George and John Sail, two little boys, the latter only two years old, were about to be toma hawked as too young to be of any value as prisoners, when a warrior less hirsty than the rest proposed a test of John's capability of endurance and nerve. To ascertain if he would make a plucky Indian, and so be worth the raising, they determined to roll him down a high and steep stony bank, where the knocks and went the cruel ordeal without a whimper or wincing, or any show of fear or suffer-ing; and with a smile began to clamber up the bank, seeming to say, "Do that again." Such coolness and self-posession in a little child struck them intense admiration, and they adopted him and his brother. George grew up him and his brother. George grew up to manhood and married among them, returned to Harrison county, and lived a long and useful life. The untiring industry of the Chinese is strikingly illustrated in what they term the "Garden of China," consisting of 50,000 square miles around Shanghai under the highest state of cultivation. This vast track of tillage, larger than the whole State of New York, is formed principally of meadow land, where myriads of men and women labor to exact fro nature her utmost resources. As the secrets of Chinese skill and energy are gradually revealed to us we discover that this wonderful people enjoy a much more elevated civilization than the world has hitherto consented to accord them.
